

ARE YOU READY FOR A CHAOTIC 2021?

November 3rd was election day. Or an election day. Or just another day in the election cycle. Take your pick. By the time you read this, we might have an election result or we might just have a mess...

It didn't used to be like this.

The next few weeks will be some of the most momentous in America's recent history. But that very fact points out something critical about the situation today – no matter who wins the election.

Regardless of which side emerges victorious, there will be a significant portion of the population that doubts the integrity of the election system. After the court cases are settled, the circumstances for continued social unrest and tension will grow.

The question is, are you ready to weather the coming turbulence?

The Bumpy Road Ahead

We don't know how big the calamity will be, but we know it's coming. In addition to problems with the U.S. financial system, media controlled narratives, disruption ruling the streets, and many of the Constitution's individual safeguards being undermined – we have distrust and volatility in our political climate that many have never seen at levels like this before. When the rule of man overcomes the rule of law, it's of great significance who the man is.

For those who have been paying attention, 2020 has offered a very clear warning about America's situation and what we will face going forward. We have seen raw governmental power demonstrated in a way most Americans could never have imagined. And as the pandemic (and the ensuing restrictions) added even more social pressures to our daily lives, we have seen a sharp division in this country and across the world.

Alongside these circumstances has become a mainstream news system that continues to push further into subjective & calculated narrative undertones. Instead of allowing the viewer to determine outcomes, mainstream news outlets have become emboldened, even brazen with their presentation of thematic biases. It's no longer the news, rather a sporting event, in which you root for "your team,".

Pair this with increased "heavy-handed," tactics being employed through online communication platforms for information that doesn't meet the "standards," of the tech giants and you have a recipe for growing social concern, unrest, and tension.

We Are Not Helpless

That's the bad news. The good news is that truth is still transcendent, and there are many millions of Americans who are preparing for what is ahead.

So start building. Build your wisdom, build your relationships, build your finances, and strengthen your situation. Build up your family. Build up your community. Here are some more specific thoughts.

1. Make sure that basic supplies of food, water, and sanitation are present. A little preparation here can go a long way.
2. Communicate now with friends and family regarding a game plan. It doesn't need to be complex or expensive, just a set of ground rules in case of social disruption.
3. Be aware of issues within your own community. Know what's happening around you.
4. Stay on top of your financial footprint. Monitor the financial condition of your bank, and know what assets are not tied into a closed system. Have some cash on hand and some precious metals for uncertain times.
5. Don't let fear rule, be a light to your friends and family. In turbulent times, it can be challenging to know what is ahead. By putting forth some good effort now, you can be an aid to your friends, family, and community in the future.

Don't try to go it alone. The destroyers are trying to divide and conquer. Don't make it easy for them. Join with other productive people and make new friendships. Find out whom you can trust and who can do what well. Make sure others know to make the above preparations, as well.

McAlvany ICA has helped investors for over 45 years navigate challenging financial times. Stay on top of your financial footprint with our free Market Readiness Worksheet – CLICK HERE